

LA Scenting Website

Client Feedback

Home Page

- The imagery chosen looks premium and that's what we want, though. - Provided imagery description.
- I think the CTA in the Masthead should be 'Learn More' and link to the About Us page, as it's unlikely that a new visitor would go straight from the home page to booking a consultation without learning more. - Updated Changed
- In Our Stories we'd need content for preferably 4 but at least 3 case studies - Multiple case studies as needed as they can be scrolled through.
- in What Our Clients Say we would need quotes to add here, so if we cannot get those easily (or permission for quotes), then we'd need to remove this section or replace it. This section can be hidden from the backend till we have atleast two testimonials to be added.
- Typo in the 'Our Philosophy' CTA button - Updated
- Memory that lasts. Sensory Forever - I'd reword this. We will closely go over the final site content initial draft that you'll provide, so when that's ready we'd like that in an excel / Google sheet format which specifies which cells relate to what sections and pages - This will shared separately on the email.
- Bottom section should be called 'The Journal' rather than 'Blogs' to have consistent nomenclature - Updated
- And we'd need at least 3-4 articles ready for launch — which we will provide - Noted.

Workshop Page

- I think the flow works pretty well, but only if we have enough content for this page, so we will take care of this content - Understood, noted.

Changes on the document has been made, reflected more clearly on the design PDF.

Imagery/Video: Show large, premium spaces such as hotels, offices, retail stores, or residences, with the space as the hero. Optional to feature individuals pausing to immerse themselves in the atmosphere, highlighting the emotional impact of scent.

The overall feel should be luxurious, cinematic, and sensory-driven, communicating how LA Scenting transforms spaces into memorable experiences.

Text 1 - Should in one word emotionally have the reader understand what the end user of the product the person who enters and smells the scent should feel on an emotional level.

Text 2 - Describe in one line what LA Scenting is.

Imagery/Video:

Main Image

Each case study should feature a primary image and a supporting image. The primary image should capture the essence of the project, whether it's a space, brand, consultation, product, or experience.

Secondary Image

The supporting image should provide additional context, showcasing another perspective, detail, outcome, or environment related to the project. This flexible approach ensures every case study can be visually represented regardless of its nature while maintaining a consistent layout across the website.

Heading

Title of the Project

Description

Short description of the project, should induce curiosity and understanding of the core project.

Buttons - Scrolling through the list of featured case studies.

Imagery/Video:

The centre image should act as a clean visual focal point that supports the content rather than competing with it. Imagery should be simple, premium, and uncluttered, featuring a single hero element such as a fragrance bottle, diffuser, or sensory-inspired visual. Avoid busy compositions and excessive details, ensuring the surrounding service cards, headings, and descriptions remain easy to read and visually prominent. The image should reinforce the premium nature of the brand while serving as an elegant centrepiece for the section.

Text - This needs to give the idea that explains that this all the areas of expertise and things we do.

Short Description of the area of expertise.

Animation: When the cursor is hovered over each box, the description appears with a small animation.

WHAT OUR CLIENTS SAY

Imagery/Video:

As the headshot is displayed at a smaller size, the image should be closely framed on the face to ensure the individual remains clearly visible and recognizable. Avoid crops that cut into the face or place key facial features near the edges of the frame. The subject should be centred with sufficient spacing around the face to maintain clarity, professionalism, and visual impact.

OUR PHILOSOPHY

Imagery/Video:

As the headshot is displayed at a smaller size, the image should be closely framed on the face to ensure the individual remains clearly visible and recognizable. Avoid crops that cut into the face or place key facial features near the edges of the frame. The subject should be centred with sufficient spacing around the face to maintain clarity, professionalism, and visual impact.

Button - Directed to the philosophy page.

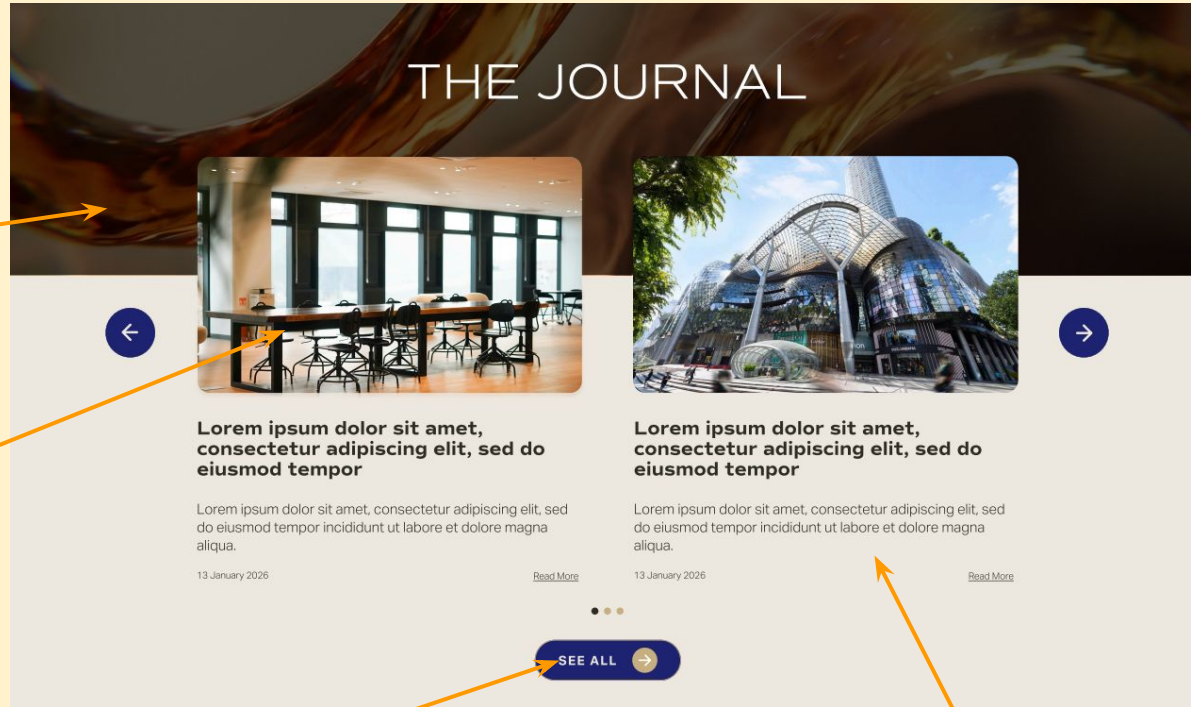

Highlight two ideologies or philosophies, with a short one liner, so as to build curiosity to click on the button.

Background Image

The background image should complement the website's overall colour palette and visual language, helping the section blend seamlessly into the browsing experience without overpowering the content.

Article Thumbnail

The thumbnail should be the primary image associated with the article, clearly representing its subject matter and providing an immediate visual cue about the content.

Button - Directed to the The Blog Page.

Title - Should give the jist of the article maybe even prompting to read more.

Description - Should carry a short one liner or interesting part of the article.
